IGNORANT OZARK NATIVES

WORRY MRS. MOYER-WING

Mrs. Alice Curtis Moyer-Wing, who has switched from her erstwhile task of "elevating" the Ozarks to spreading the gospel of the Republican party, is very much worried, if the St. Louis Globe-Democrat has correctly quoted her. It seems that Mrs. Moyer-Wing labors under a delusion that the wicked Democrats are trying to take unfair advantage of the poor, helpless "natives" of the Ozarks. These Democrats, Mrs. Moyer-Wing says, are telling the Ozark residents that they may vote for Cox, Roosevelt and Long on one ticket but will have a chance to scratch the Covenant of the League of Nations which will be on another ballot.

Does Mrs. Moyer-Wing really believe this rot? Does she think that the residents of Springfield and Carthage and Joplin or the Ozark farmers with their fertile acres are so credulous as to believe that the electorate will have a chance to directly pass on the Covenant? Does she really believe that Democratic politicians think so little of the intelligence of the residents of the Ozarks that they would seek to spread such foolish propaganda?

Apparently so! Those who remember reading Mrs. Moyer-Wing's series of Ozark articles which were published in the old Republic and the Post-Dispatch are willing to take oath that no canard, if given an Ozark setting, is too foolish or too wild for Mrs. Moyer-Wing to believe. Mrs. Moyer-Wing, in writing these articles, frequently fell into what she was pleased to term the vernacular of the "natives," attributing to them fearful and wonderful phrases which were unintelligible to ninety-nine per cent of the residents of the Ozarks. Reading Mrs. Moyer-Wing's articles, one would imagine the Ozarks to be a benighted land of clay roads and mud huts, inhabited by ignorant snuff-takers and razor-back hogs and minus schools, churches, automobiles, telephones and the other conveniences of modern day life.

She never seemed to see the real Ozarks, the Ozarks dotted with progressive towns and busy cities, peopled with many of the best residents of Missouri, leading the state in poultry raising, dairying, small fruit and berry growing, mining and possessing many of the finest schools and churches in Missouri.

Does Mrs. Moyer-Wing know that Southwest Missouri, on basis of population, possesses more accredited high schools than any other section of the state? Has she ever heard of Drury College, Springfield Normal, Marionville College, Morrisville College, the School of the Ozarks, Cotter College, Southwest Baptist College and Loretta Academy at Springfield?

The Ozarks do not need Mrs. Moyer-Wing as a guide and mentor. Both the men and women of that section of the state are perfectly capable of voting without her kindly assistance and her fears that their ignorance may lead them into voting wrong are groundless. Many of them are far better versed in politics than the woman who would coach them and, it is hoped, few of them, if placed in the position, which recently confronted her, would so far forget themselves as to act as did Mrs. Moyer-Wing and vote for the "white-washing" of Jacob L. Babler.

Now Plenty of Rain, Thank You

After a prolonged drought, moisture was turned on Saturday, and for the next four days, until Wednesday morning, rain continued to fall, almost without ceasing. Seldom was the downpour heavy, generally being slow and gentle, just the kind of a rain that soaks into the earth and does the greatest amount of good to the soil and to growing and planted crops.

The late drouth was more serious than many realized, owing to the fine fall weather, which prevented a burning of fields and vegetation, but permitted things to remain green and luscious. But in the depletion of all kinds of water reservoirs was the drouth particularly noticeable. Many stock ponds had entirely dried up, and stock often had to be driven long distances to water. Also, in some instances, wells and cisterns had become exhausted and water had to be hauled for household uses. The late abundant rains were indeed a God-send.

NOTICE OF THANKS.

The wife and children of Rev. Carter Martin wish to express their thanks of appreciation to this many friends for their kindness during his last illness.
